About the Home Office UK

The UK Home Office is a ministerial department responsible for Home Affairs within the UK. It is the lead government department for immigration and passports, borders, drugs policy, crime, fire, counter-terrorism and police. The department keeps the UK safe through three strands of policy and operational delivery covering; Homeland Security, Public Safety and Borders Immigration and Citizenship. It has a vibrant science and technology programme that supports the delivery of Home Office priorities. For further information see: <https://www.gov.uk/government/organisations/home-office/about>
